A sign-in form titled "Sign In" centered on a light gray background. The form is a white rounded rectangle with a subtle drop shadow. It contains two input fields: the top one is labeled "username" and the bottom one is labeled "password". Below these fields is a solid blue button with the text "Log in" in white. The entire form is centered within a larger gray rectangular area.

Dude, such a cool story bro! I would cut out the scene where Spider-Man lost his powers, kind of a slow moment there, but other than that really strong premise and great character development!

Mary-Jane Watson
@theatergirl323

Wait... You were Spider-Man this whole time!!!???? Can't believe it!! Loved your story by the way.

FAQ

by Olha Pelishok — last modified 2007-08-14 07:18

What is the aim of this site?

talk.quintagroup.com - was developed to be a place where visitors would be able to engage with Quintagroup on topics important to them concerning the information technology industry. All the visitors have an access to blogs written by QuintaGroup employees, customers, and analysts. They may visit Quintagroup forums and let the company know what they think about this or that matter. The topics are broad and relevant, including Zope and Plone hosting, Zope and Plone development, Plone products and Plone skins, web design and Content Management Solutions.

What is Quintagroup?

 Quintagroup's Content Management System Development Services address a wide variety of requirements that clients face, from basic author-only website updates (simple content management solution) to sophisticated team-based workflow (Enterprise Content Management Solution). As part of its Content Management Service offering, Quintagroup works in a close cooperation with clients to determine the best solution most suited for their environmental and personnel requirements.

What is Plone?

Plone is a ready-to-run content management system that is built on the powerful and free Zope application server. Plone is easy to set up, extremely flexible, and provides you with a system for managing web content that is ideal for project groups, communities, web sites, extranets and intranets.

What is a CMS?

A content management system, or CMS, is a web application designed to make it easy for non-technical users to add, edit and, well, manage a website.

Not only do content management systems help website users with content editing, they also take care of a lot of "behind the scenes" work: automatically generate navigation elements, making content searchable and indexable, keeping track of users, their permissions and security settings and much, much more.

About Us

About MailChimpBrand GuidePress CenterPress ReleasesJobsPartnerships

What Do We Do?

We make it easy to send email newsletters to your customers, manage your subscriber lists, and track campaign performance. Unlike some of our competitors, we don't "dumb things down." We take extremely powerful tools that sophisticated marketers use (like segmentation, a/b testing, and ROI tracking), and we make them accessible to anyone. And because our platform uses an open API, it's easy to integrate internal systems (like Salesforce) and web applications (like Magento and Drupal) with our email marketing engine. That's why over 300,000 users, who range from small 1-person startups to Fortune 500 corporations use MailChimp.

Our History & Where We Got The Funny Name

We started out as a web development company (The Rocket Science Group) back in April 2000. We specialized in "nerdy stuff" like database-driven websites and web applications (before they were called "web applications") for companies like CNN, Coca-Cola, Arthritis Foundation, Worldspan, and Delta Airlines. We built a reputation for building quality applications that were "actually useful."

Then in 2001, we saw that some of our clients were having trouble sending HTML email newsletters to their customers. They basically had two options. They could somehow rig Microsoft Outlook to send an HTML email with broken links, broken images, and broken attachments, or they could pay thousands of dollars a month for some bloated enterprise-level service that was packed with features they never used and never understood. We thought, "Sheesh, people are too busy running their businesses to learn how to code HTML emails. Email marketing is so easy, a monkey could be doing it for them." We put our pragmatic programming skills to work and built a simple tool that included everything our clients needed and nothing they didn't. We made it so easy, a human could use it. Our clients loved it. So we made it available to the public. The word kinda spread.

In 2007, we officially ended all web development work as "The Rocket Science Group" and focused exclusively on MailChimp. And the rest is history.
